Attention!

CITIZEN'S SOLDIERS—In the late war the superiority of our marksmen in the art of shooting, was strikingly manifested, and not less obvious were the advantages derived therefrom. To this qualification we were chiefly indebted for our victories—when our troops saw that their bullets moved down the enemy, whilst themselves sustained but little injury, it taught them to look down upon the boasting veterans from Europe, with contempt. Peace has now returned; but again we may be required to take up arms. Already has the short-sighted monarch of Spain, made to our administration, insolent demands, which may lead to hostilities, and that too, immediately on our Southern borders. Then let us be prepared for the event by the cultivation of those arts which have heretofore sustained us—Let us practise sharp-shooting, and encourage excellence by offering competent rewards to those who are eminent, until we not only astonish the natives on the other side of the big water, but show them that it may be rather dangerous to stand in battle array before western militia, who, in the heat of action, cannot only hit the man aimed at, but place the ball on the very spot they choose, even the eye.

With these views the subscribers propose to have a

at Manchester, adjoining Lexington, for a valuable two story Brick house and lot, together with a Stone Smith Shop, the whole valued at $3000, or thirty shots at $100 each, at sixty yards off hand.

Any person paying to the subscriber, either in money or such property as they may agree on, $100, shall be entitled to make one shot, either by himself or friend, with his own gun, and the nearest shot shall take the house and appurtenances, and a deed shall be made on request.

Captains of Companies are requested to subscribe one shot for each of the Companies, and to send forward their best marksmen, by which means a spirit of emulation will be excited amongst the gentlemen composing their command.

The shooting to take place on the second Saturday in March, at which time judges will be chosen, by whom all questions are to be decided.

Applications to be made to William Marshall or Charles Wilks, to subscribe for shots.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO THE LADIES.

THE Lexington Manufacturing Company are desirous of obtaining a quantity of fine bleached Linen and Cotton RAGS, which are necessary to enable them to manufacture the important article of fine

Paper, of which so much is annually imported, and might be avoided if the patriotism or economy of the ladies of Kentucky, would induce them to adopt the customs of the ladies in the eastern states, viz.

to keep a Rag Bag, which is usually hung up in a place convenient for the purpose, and in which are deposited the Rags that almost daily appear in every large family.—At the end of the year your rag bags thus attended, will produce you a liberal sum for pin-money, and greatly aid the important manufactories of your state.

Six Cents in money will be paid for fine bleached

Linen or Cotton Rags—and a price in proportion for coarser quality, or for tow made from flax or hemp.

OLD IRON SIDES

ON MILITARY EDUCATION.

We are obliged by the gentleman to whom it is addressed, with permission to publish the following interesting and scientific letter:

Copy of a letter from Gen. John Armstrong, late Secretary of War, to Col. R. M. Johnson, of the House of Representatives.
La Vergne, (near Red Hook,) 10th January, 1816.

DEAR SIR—Finding you engaged on the subject of Military Schools, it may not be amiss to give you the outlines of those of France, which time, and much attention on the part of the government, have brought to great perfection. This may be the more necessary, as I have seen no printed work on the subject, and as I know no officer of your army sufficiently conversant with details, to supply the defect.

After the fall of Robespierre, when the storms of the revolution had somewhat subsided, the National Convention turned its attention to military education, having (like ourselves) frequently seen and felt the want of it in their public officers. Out of this arose the institution, called the Polytechnic Schools—in which, science became the basis of military service. In these schools, a certain number of students was annually admitted, after having, upon previous examination, satisfied the conditions of the programme of admission, viz: a knowledge of arithmetic, algebra, as far as equations (included,) and geometry. When sufficiently instructed here, they are sent to the School of Application, in which theory is reduced to practice.

The plan of one of these schools gives you the plan of all—it is as follows, viz:

- Military Functionaries.
- 1 Colonel, commanding.
 - 1 Chief of Battalion.
 - 1 Quartermaster, Treasurer.
 - 3 Captains.
 - 3 Lieutenants.
 - 3 sub-Lieutenants.
 - 3 Fencing Masters.
 - 1 Drum Major, and 3 Drummers.
- The Colonel should be selected, with great attention to his morals, manners, temper and literary attainments. He should be well acquainted with all the branches taught in the school, because it makes an important part of his duty to inspect the progress of the students. He is stationary with them.
- The Chief of Battalion, Captains and Lieutenants, take cognizance of the food, clothing and equipments of the students, maintain discipline, and direct, in person, the military exercises and duties.
- The Quartermaster-Treasurer is charged with the fiscal part of the establishment—receipts and expenditures of money, contracts, &c.
- The Fencing Masters give lessons on the uses of the sword three times a week, during the hours of recreation.

- Civil Functionaries.
- 3 Professors of Analysis and Mechanics.
 - 1 Of Chemistry.
 - 1 Of descriptive Geometry.
 - 1 Of Fortification.
 - 1 Of Architecture.
 - 1 Of Analysis, applied to Geometry.
 - 1 Of bridge, canal and road-making, and
 - 3 Of Drawing.
- To these are occasionally added,
- 1st A Jury of Admission.
- This is composed of the following commissioners: the Chief of Battalion and the Professors. It sits annually, and on a day fixed and promulgated, and judges absolutely and exclusively (under the instruction of the law) of the fitness of those who would enter the school, as well as to physical organization and appearance, as to age and qualifications. With regard to age, the rule is positive—none less than 15, nor more than 20, can be received—nor is any thing left to discretion with regard to attainments—the candidates must be well acquainted with arithmetic, algebra, (including equation,) and geometry. Each candidate, on admission, declares the branch of science to which he devotes himself.

2d A Council of Examination and Improvement. This consists of the members of the Jury of admission, an officer of rank of the engineer corps, an artillery officer of distinction, and such scientific citizens, as the government may think proper to associate with them. It is their duty to assemble annually on a given day: to put each scholar under a separate examination with regard to the studies in which he has been engaged; to note his progress, and to make special report thereof to the War Department: they also take cognizance of the order and economy of the establishment generally: the kind and quality of provisions made for it, in regard to books, stationery, clothing, food and fuel, and the price of these to the students; the state of manners and morals prevailing among them; the punishments inflicted on delinquents, &c. &c. The result of their enquiries on these heads, are also reported to the War Department, with an indication of the means necessary to correct any evils which may be found to exist.

I have been told, that the late Emperor, who was himself educated in one of these schools, knowing the effects of indolence, favoritism, &c. &c. in examiners, and knowing also the tricks of teachers in covering the faults of their pupils, constituted examinations, different from those of public and stated occurrence, which had the effect of keeping teachers and pupils constantly on the alert. These extra-examiners were men of high character, who could not be made to report otherwise than truly, and who had no connection with the establishment.

STUDENTS.

These are 200 in number, which are divided into three classes or divisions, and each division into three brigades. The title of Chief of Brigade is conferred on one of the most meritorious in each. It is the duty of these Chiefs of Brigade to maintain order, and to see that the students are properly occupied in the hours of study; they will report the disorderly or negligent, (to the Colonel commanding,) and also the sober and diligent. Their reports cannot be fewer than one for each month.

When a young man has gone through this course of instruction and has passed his final examination with approbation, he is sent to the school of application (as before stated) with the rank of Sub-Lieutenant.

You may think extraordinary, as I did, to find that geography makes no part of the Polytechnic course. The truth, however, is, that the school books and maps accompanying them, on that subject, are well enough for commercial purposes and for the use of the readers of history, newspapers and travels, but fall entirely short of military uses.—These are only to be reached by the great topographical charts, by the models in Papier Maché, where they exist, and where they do not, by sketches made on the spot by Engineers. These note every hill and hollow, every church, and village, and dwelling house, every creek or river, with their bridges or fords, and every road, path, plain, copse or forest within their limits. How different are these from ordinary maps, and how impossible to furnish schools with them! The study of general geography is therefore left to a man's own taste, and when a knowledge of particular geography is required of him, he is furnished by the government with the means of attaining it.

Foreign languages make no part of this course, and when these are acquired, it is by private tuition, the means of which are every where attainable. The institutions seem to have had no object beyond that of making useful and practical men. Hence their great attention to geometry, drawing and map making, architecture, civil and military, and chemistry applied to the arts.

I may have forgotten some minor branches, in the haste with which this has been written, but none of important character. In all the business of this world, the two great points are, 1st, to lay down a good plan, and, 2d, to give it complete and constant execution.—This first is a legislative duty; the second, executive or ministerial. Failure is generally in the last. What in this country we have particularly to guard against is, want of subordination in both teachers and pupils, and a spirit of jobbing and money making in public agents. These besetting sins grow out of (what we have much reason to value) the freedom of our civil institutions and the almost universal spirit of trade and commerce among us. Can you find a remedy for them?

Yours respectfully and sincerely,
J. ARMSTRONG.

THE BRITISH TREATY.

Whilst this subject was under consideration in the Senate, there were several points on which information was required from the Treasury Department, by the Committee on Foreign Relations, as being intimately connected with the merits and bearings of the Treaty. Not having room to publish the documents on this subject at length, we must endeavor to generalize them.

1. As to the quantity of cotton exported to the British dominions in Europe during the years of our commercial prosperity (on which article, be it borne in mind, a large discriminating duty was paid in Great Britain), it appeared that the quantity exported to those dominions, including England, Scotland, Ireland, Man and Berwick, was

From 1st Oct 1806 to 30th September, 1807, 53,180,211 lbs.
From ditto 1814, to ditto 1815, 44,973,265 lbs.

The last line, though nominally a year of course, only embraced the time from the 17th February to the 31st September: during which six months the export was enormous.

2. As to the tonnage of the United States employed in Foreign coasting and fishing trades, it appeared there were employed in the Year. Foreign trade. Coasting. Fishing.

1805 922,298 284,863 59,445
1806 1,044,005 286,909 68,357
1807 1,116,241 285,090 75,744

No later estimates was furnished.

3. As to the West India Islands, it appeared there was exported, to the following amount, in years ending 30th September.

British W. Indies, 1807 1815
Domestic 5,322,276 1,571,490
Foreign 630,361 30,975

All other W. I. Islands.
Domestic 9,025,497 7,263,993
Foreign 16,014,300 1,263,556

4. As to the value of goods imported in American and foreign vessels from the Cape of Good Hope, and places beyond the same, the duties thereon, from which an idea of the amount and value of the trade may be formed, were reported as follows:

In 1805 3,370,005
In 1806 3,803,914
In 1807 3,960,188

No estimate given of the last year's duties could afford any criterion of the trade, and none thereof is given.

5. As to the duties on imports from the West India Islands, it appeared that they were,

In 1805 1,864,119 2,360,665 1,948,672
In 1806 2,257,525 2,751,855 8,665,526
In 1807 2,257,525 2,751,855 8,665,526

There was also reported to the Senate an abstract of "Duties of Customs paid in G. Britain in 1807 and 1815," distinguished between the importations from foreign countries and from British Colonies, and in British or foreign ships; whereby it clearly appears, that the United States have gained to the merchants very greatly by the Treaty, and of course have so far obtained an advantage to our own over foreign navigation.

LOUISVILLE, Feb. 19.
DINNER TO GEN. HARRISON.

On Saturday last a public dinner was given at the UNION HALL to this meritorious officer in the usual splendor of Mr. J. G. WATNEY.

We gladly lay before our readers the following extracts from a letter from Captain De Hart, of the steam boat ERNA, dated,

NATCHEZ, Feb. 2, 1816.

"Sunday, Jan. 21, 1816.—At 1 p. m. got under way from Shippingport, Falls of the Ohio, the river much obstructed with ice and drift wood, the Engine great part of the time stopped, and it not being practicable to run at night.

Tuesday, Jan. 30.—At 8 a. m. passed the Arkansas; at 11, 30, the little steam boat Despatch, that left Shippingport on the 3d, or 4th inst. (January) at 2 p. m. came to Point Chicot for wood; at 3, 30, the little steam boat passed by, and said he would run all night; at 4, 30, left Point Chicot, and came to at 6 p. m. much drift running.

Thursday, 1st Feb.—At 4 p. m. came to at Natchez, and sent Mr. Winn a piece of fresh Beef, bought in the Louisville market.

Ten days from Shippingport, and 110 hours running from said place, during which time frequently stopped every day with the drift wood.

The steam boat Despatch arrived here at 11 or 12, this day, and ran all the night after passing me."

LOUISVILLE, Dec. 9.

A private letter mentions, that the British regiments returning from France will take the route of Havre-de-Grace. But the guards are still in Paris, remaining there, it is supposed, in consequence of a request of the duke of Wellington by the duke of Richelieu. The duke of Wellington gave a splendid ball on the first instant in celebration of the peace.

It is mentioned in a private letter from Paris, that M. Forbin had laid on the table of the chamber of deputies, a notice of a motion for the recall and trial of Fouché.

The Dutch letters say, the departure of the prince of Orange for St. Petersburg has given rise to much interesting speculation on the future union of Russian interests with those of the Netherlands, and the consequent decline of British influence in the latter quarter.

An article from Turin gives a most distressing account of an attack made by the Tunisian pirates at St. Antiocho. It reflects additional disgrace upon the Maritime powers of Europe, for suffering with impunity these lawless violations of the common rights of society.

The court of Portugal persists in remaining at Brazil, and refuses to return to Europe. That court lately received a courier from Madrid with dispatches, the contents of which had not transpired; but it is supposed that Spain requests the prince regent to declare war against the independents; and that Ferdinand VII. has asked one of the daughters of the prince in marriage.

The French prisoners at Dartmoor will leave that depot as soon as transports can be procured to take them home.

The discussions between our government and Ferdinand of Spain, which had grown pretty warm, are now become more conciliatory; but the persecution of the patriots has not decreased. Three millions of dollars have arrived at Cadiz from Lima; in addition to this supply, Ferdinand is about to impose a contribution of five millions sterling on all classes of people of Old Spain, excepting the clergy!

From the London Times, Dec. 15.

It is proposed to banish from France Sotile, Alce, Fexelmans, Lamarque, Fandamme and one or two other generals, besides some celebrated non-military revolutionists.—Most of the former, we understand, are going to the United States of America, and what measures they may there devise against our interest in that hemisphere it behoves our government well to consider. The hatred of Sotile, in particular, against every thing English, is unbounded; and he is, beyond dispute, the most skilful of all the French generals, would it not be a prudent step on our part to demand that those gentry should not be permitted to go to America? There are plenty of airy, wholesome islands in the Mediterranean, where they might live quite as comfortably, as Savary and Lallemand at Malta, or as Bonaparte and his associates at St. Helena. Any safe retirement of that kind would be better than hearing of them a twelve month hence, at the head of an American army, invading Canada.

December 16.

A change of ministers is still talked of, especially if the law of amnesty be rejected.—The ministers whom report designates as going out, the duke de Richelieu, Barbe Marbois, and de Caze.

The speech of the duke de Richelieu on declaring the vote for the death of Ney did him honor. "I was myself twice condemned to death during the revolutionary torrent, my conscience acquitted me of guilt—I felt that in a moment of such agitation little regard is paid to justice—and what I then felt makes me shudder at the idea of pronouncing the judgment of death on another. Time has done justice to my motives, and time may equally acquit marshal Ney."

It is said that the duchess of Angoulême was so alarmed at the notion of the king's leaning to the advice of that part of his ministry who were for granting a pardon to Ney, that she did not quit his chamber from morning till night, nor suffered a single creature to approach him in whom she had not confidence.

The following is the list of peers who voted against the death of the marshal:—The duke de Montmorency, Fontannes, Marleville, Gouvion, Berthelot, (the celebrated chymist,) Chaffeloup, due de Broglie, Tally, Tolendal, Courail, Potcher, de Richebourg, Collet, Le Nois la Roche, Lafoinas, Kiem, Mercier, Nerwind and Chollet.

The following refused to vote, declaring they were not sufficiently instructed, in consequence of the marshal's council being stopped in the defence by the king's commissioners: Nicolas, Brigue, de Aligre, St. Suzanne, the duke de Choleul.

BONAPARTE.

Extract from letters received from officers of his Majesty's Ship Northumberland.

"His Majesty's Ship Northumberland, October 20, 1815.

"We arrived here on the 15th, after rather a pleasant, though long passage, of ten weeks; and General Bonaparte landed on the 16th in the evening, when it was quite dark: he was muffled up in a large surcoat. A guard went before him to disperse the mob. You may judge of the state of his mind and spirits by what he did not do, during the passage.—He never came out of his cabin but in the evenings after dinner; he then, almost without exception, went and leant against the breach of the foremost gun on the weather-side of the quarter-deck, whence he never moved.—Generals Bertrand and Lascazes always came out with him, and with whom he ever continued in conversation: he appeared to take little notice of his other companions. His dress, upon these occasions, was invariably a green coat, with two plain epaulets, small cloathes, with silk stockings, and pumps, with gold buckles. At the usual ceremony of passing the Line, which we did on the 23d of September, general Bonaparte made a present to Old Neptune of one hundred Napoleons; the French generals and children gave him a double Napoleon each. The countess Bertrand is one of the most pleasant and agreeable women I ever conversed with. She said she wished we had missed the island; and I do not wonder at it; for if its boundless craggy rocks and lofty mountains strike the senses of a stranger, who can depart at pleasure, with a cold heart appalling effect, what must be the feelings of banished majesty! Nature seems to have formed it for security to its inhabitants. Had General Bonaparte ever entertained a hope of escape, when he came in sight of this place it must have been banished forever; the whole world beside, I should suppose, does not present such another spot."

Northumberland, Oct. 18.

"Bonaparte was very much pleased with the attention shewn to him, whilst on board this ship, however he might have felt upon subjects connected with bringing him here.—He publicly thanked captain Ross on the quarter-deck, for his kindness, and requested he would do the same for him to the officers."

St. Helena, Oct. 22.

"On the 10th instant a sloop of war arrived with the intelligence that a fleet was approaching our Island, in which was Bonaparte! This news threw us all into great confusion. On Sunday, the 15th, the Northumberland arrived here with the emperor and his suite. On Monday, his surgeon, (an Englishman) called on me, and took me with him on board. I was introduced to gen. Bertrand and his lady, and the other passengers; after remaining a few minutes in the ward room, Bonaparte was announced to be on deck, when we all went up. I approached him and took off my hat; he did the same; he asked me if there was any good watchmaker in the place. I told him there was a very good one, a Mr. Solomon, who is also a very respectable merchant. He requested me to take his watches to him, as they were out of repair; one was a large gold repeater, the other a silver repeater, both musical; the latter, he says, he always had with him in his carriage."

Bonaparte did not send a single letter to Europe by the ship arrived from St. Helena, nor would he permit one of his companions to write. So that nothing can be known from themselves of their situation or their sentiments. Minutes of all Bonaparte's political conversations were carefully taken. It seems he spoke with great freedom of the characters and views of all the potentates, as well as of their ministers; and those minutes, which are considered truly important, are now in the hands of our ministers.—According to Bonaparte's opinion, the confederacy of the allies was on the point of breaking at the eve of the battle of Waterloo; and if he had gained the ascendancy, would have been broken asunder in forty-eight hours.

Extract of a letter from Spain.

"The persecutions in this unhappy country still continue, or even increase. Neither high nor low are separated. Don Antonio Ruiz Padron, one of the most distinguished members of the cortes, an ecclesiastic of great merit, and a sincere patriot, has been condemned to perpetual imprisonment; and Don Pablo Lopez has been awarded ten years confinement. King Ferdinand we are told, has made serious remonstrances to the English government on the subject of the freedom which the English journals have used, in relating the enterprise of the patriotic Portier, and lamenting his unhappy fate. A contribution of 500 millions of reals, (about 5,000,000) which the government intend to impose upon all classes of the nation (with the exception of the clergy) excites a general feeling of displeasure, and causes a fermentation that may result in unexpected opposition. Nothing is known with certainty concerning the widow of Portier."

KIEL, Nov. 10.

A merchantman arrived lately at Kiel, which was intended to convey Napoleon to America.—A French captain, who had married the daughter of a miller in Holstein, and after Napoleon's return, served under Clausey, at Bordeaux, resolved to save Bonaparte on board his own vessel, while he was at Rochefort. For this purpose he had casks lined with mattresses, in order to conceal Napoleon, Savary, and Bertrand, in case of need. He had every thing necessary on board. The ship was to sail as soon as it had got into the open sea, to New York, instead of Kiel; but the plan was baffled by Bonaparte's impatience and surrender. This ship is now at Kiel, where the lined casks, &c. are to be seen.

PARIS, Nov. 27.

Lavalette's trial closed at midnight on Tuesday, when, after five hours deliberation, the jury found him guilty. The criminal was immediately brought into court, and sentence of death was passed upon him. Three days, however, were allowed him to appeal against the sentence, which he has done. The appeal would be heard on Saturday, and as there was no doubt of its inadmissibility, his sentence was expected to be carried into execution to day. Madame Lavalette has had an audience of the king and the duchess of Angoulême to implore mercy for her husband. He conducted himself with fortitude during the trial and at the passing of the sentence.

SOUTH AMERICA.

The Independent Government of New Grenada has made proposals to this country, through our Admiral in Jamaica, of an exclusive trade; and we are enabled further to add, that, on a similar basis, it has been in our power, for two years past, to have treated with the whole of Spanish America, which, even in its subjected state, has been in the habit of consuming 12 millions sterling of European imports, but when regenerated and recovered from the existing ravages, will afford an annual and permanent vent for double this sum, since it is a fact that not more than one-sixth of the population of that extended country has hitherto been clothed in European goods.—Spanish America, therefore, presents to us an opening equal to all the rest of Europe, with the advantage of better returns.

(BY AUTHORITY.)

AN ACT

States. Provided always, That any lease to be executed by virtue of this act shall and may be determinable, at any time after the expiration of the first year, at the pleasure of Congress.

Sec. 2. And he it further enacted, That so soon as the lease aforesaid shall have been duly executed, it shall and may be lawful for the President of the U. The 22d February, 1832.

The birth-day of Gen. We regret that want of room prevents the publication of the different sets of toasts.

LEXINGTON.

Why this town has been made the subject of calumny in various parts of the state, and of proscription by the Legislature, has excited the astonishment of its inhabitants for some time back but may be very easily accounted for:—We have some neighbours, indignant with that passion common to all weak minds, called envy—who, jealous of our growth and prosperity, and desiring of becoming our rivals, and to effect their objects—CROOKED POLITICIANS AND FRAUDS—have, in other parts of the state, being unpopular with us, unite with the former; and between all these, we labour under a kind of "ban of empire," or proscription by the legislature. Even the Legislature, living among us, join heart and hand in the holy work, and thus assist in efforts "to bite off their own noses," for upon no other principle, can we account for those COSSIPPING, tales about FREE-AND-EASY, TOMAHAWK AND SCALPING KNIFE and GUS which were bandied through the Legislature at its last session. Indeed a federalist of Lexington—we have it from good authority—advised the removal of the University to Danville, to gratify his spleen against this place.—When we consider these latter facts, respecting our own citizens, we feel somewhat disposed to excuse, if we cannot wholly pardon strangers; but hence results the necessity of defending our town from the malicious tales and falsehoods circulating at its expense.—This we shall attempt in due season.

Our present remarks have been immediately occasioned by a paragraph in the last Limestone Eagle. In speaking of the Banking System, the Editor of that paper says, "It gives a false value to property—witness Lexington, Ky."—The observation of the Editor may be true; but his example was a wantonly insulting one, and we place it to its proper cause—envy.—It is moreover inapplicable to the position taken: Lexington has a smaller Banking Capital than Frankfort, yet our property is more valuable—not one-tenth of the Banking Capital of Cincinnati, yet property there is lower than ours, very little more than that of Washington, which every Limestone-man says is going to ruin—and, indeed, poorerty here is very little higher than in Limestone, which has no Bank Capital, a place which nature never intended for a town, though man attempts to counteract her laws.—Limestone has a bad landing and a bad hill to rise for wagons—the current of the river is too strong, and the bank of her principal street is falling in—the road thence to the interior of the country, longer and worse than that from Augusta below, which contains all the advantages of a good harbour, gentle current, and bank—say of ascent.—A word to the wise is enough at all times.

United States Treasury Arrangement.

We owe it to the collector of this district to state, that in our allusions to speculations which might be going on, we had no intention to impute him. On the contrary, we believe, that his conduct in office, has been uniformly correct; but we are yet satisfied, that any orders from the treasury, which in practice prevent collectors from receiving Ohio paper in this state for taxes, are unjust and vexatious. That paper is current here, and is received partially by the banks, and generally by the people, as cash in all payments. It will answer in this state, and in the neighboring states and territories, for all treasury purposes; it is received in Ohio for the same taxes; the banks which issue it are reported to be solvent; the treasury makes deposits in many of them; and receives regular returns of their situation. Why then make distinctions between Ohio and Ken. paper? The tendency of the regulation is to depreciate the credit of the former, and add to the distress which is occasioned by the want of an uniform national currency.

We had thought, that Mr. Dallas's arrangement relative to treasury notes, was not only intended to re-establish their credit, but to lessen or do away the evils arising from the want of an uniform currency, by making of treasury notes and the paper of such banks as received them, a substitute for one. Were such paper every where received for taxes, this object would be measurably obtained, or at least considerably assisted. Those who recollect the operations of the late bank of the United States, will see at once the force of our observations. The paper of that bank was only payable where it was issued; yet was current over the union, because it was every where wanted & received for imports & duties. And now, that the imports, duties and taxes, daily collected, are greater in amount, what is to prevent the same result respecting the paper of such banks as receive treasury notes, did the treasury give it due credit? This, however, the secretary does not see; and not seeing, oppresses the citizen unnecessarily, whilst they are burdened with new and unusual taxes. If he wished to make the latter unpopular, we know of no better course than the one which he has taken, by which that object could be accomplished.

It is said that the manufactures of the coarser kind of cotton goods in the United States has already so completely rivalled the foreign, that scarce an order is now sent abroad for cotton goods of that description.

PAINFULLY INTERESTING.

The following letter to the editors of the Baltimore Patriot, brought by the schooner Coquette, from a gentleman of character and integrity at Santa Martha, announces the certainty of the fall of Carthage into the hands of the Spanish royalists, and with it the violent seizure of several American vessels, and the imprisonment of the people on board of them, many of whom have died of bad treatment and prison disease. We hope that government will promptly follow the British example, mentioned in the letter, and despatch, even if it should produce a war with Spain, two or three frigates to procure or coerce the release of our suffering countrymen, some of whom we personally know to be respectable citizens of Baltimore.

Santee Fee had also fallen before the royalists—Balt. Pat.

Extract to the Editors—dated

Santa Martha, Jan. 10, 1816.

"Humanity compels me to make known to you and the world the present sufferings of my unfortunate countrymen, who are at this moment in Carthagea groaning under the horrid calamities and distresses attending a Spanish prison, loaded with irons. Scant allowance of bread and water—devoured with vermin, and what is still worse, close confinement, have, in this hot climate, introduced a distemper among them, which will if not shortly relieved carry the whole of them off. At and since the fall of Carthagea there have eleven American and three English vessels fallen into their hands, their crews imprisoned and loaded with irons—among them several from Baltimore. I was conversing yesterday with a Mr. Lemon of Charleston, direct from Carthagea, who saw and talked with captains Hacket and Almeda, and a Mr. Cooper, all from Baltimore, through the bars of the prison. The British frigate Junon, captain Tait, left this on the 6th inst. for Carthagea, in order to release all English subjects imprisoned in that place. I hope our government will take the same and only means of rescuing from an untimely death hundreds of our countrymen. I have in this place ocular demonstration of their injustice and cruelty towards Americans. The schooner Charles Stewart of New Orleans, owned by Messrs. Stanley and Stratton, who were on board of the schooner and bound to this place, was captured within sight of the harbor of Santa Martha under the pretext of their going to Carthagea—captain, owners and crew all thrown in prison, and have since all died with bad treatment and fever, except the captain and Mr. Stanley—the recovery of the latter is much doubted. If gentlemen you think proper to make public the purport of this letter, you have my consent; and if it should be the means, through your interference, of saving from famine and death our countrymen, I need not tell you how gratifying it would be to your very humble and truly obedient &c."

TO MR. SMITH, EDITOR OF THE REPORTER.

In your last paper, under the head of "next President," you say the door is now open, and time too precious to be over scrupulous as to the manner of treating the subject. And then follow a piece signed GRACCHUS, no doubt fully up to your ideas of the manner in which this subject should be treated—praising Gen. Armstrong's "daring sublime genius," and brandishing some choice and dignified epithets against Mr. Madison, M. Dallas, and Mr. Monroe, such as "degrading his name, Philadelphia lawyer, cold blooded politician, intriguing dissembler," &c.

This, to be sure, is a very dispassionate mode of discussion, and is likely to enlighten us with those mild sallies of genius in which you are so peculiarly happy.

Your Editorial labours have for some time past been suspended, and while your friends were anxious for the restoration of your health, they had some reason to hope that time, reflection, and mingling a little more with the world, would also have restored to us the benefit of your intellectual powers, with some degree of moderation;—but you seem to have sought control of the Reporter, with all your former spirit of infatuation, that you could, whenever it seemed mete unto you, controul, and in your own language, give "tone to public sentiment."

If you have upon former occasions given tone to public sentiment, it was in the advocacy of principles and measures, supported by your republican friends. Upon the subject, however, of the next President, you will find yourself without the support of those friends. Wholly unaided by them—indeed, running directly counter to their wishes and feelings—you will find the task of giving tone to public sentiment upon this subject, more difficult than you imagine.

Who have you to support you, sir, in this detraction and abuse of Col. Monroe? Take away from your cause the federalists, and enumerate some ten or twelve of your particular associates, (who like you see can merit no where, except in the "sublime and daring genius" of General Armstrong) and the strength of your party is told. And yet you seem to manage matters as if the state of Kentucky was already with you—you write for the Reporter—your former co editor of the Gazette, (both of you pledged on the files of that paper against Col. Monroe in your zeal for Gen. Armstrong) writes for the Palladium—you both reside in Lexington—you copy your friend's piece from the Palladium, and are "truly gratified at this coincidence of sentiment, from a source so respectable."

Is this the way you expect to give tone to public opinion, and deceive others as to the sentiments of Kentucky, in regard to Mr. Monroe?—In opposition to the wishes and opinions of your republican friends, you have taken this conspicuous ground of marked hostility to their favourite candidate for the Presidency; and you will not therefore feel pained at them, that your shallow artifices should be detected and exposed—the more especially when you reflect that you are now perverting, the hitherto useful columns of the Reporter, to sow division and dissensions, amongst that party to whom it owes its extensive circulation and support. Nine-tenths of the republicans in Kentucky, will read with regret and pity, the last number of this paper—nine-tenths are in favour of Mr. Monroe as their President, and the result of the election will prove it—not a man of them but regrets to see their cause abandoned by the paper they have so long supported—not a man of them but pities the weakness which can endeavour to excite a division amongst those friends who have hitherto uniformly acted together.

BRUTUS.

N. B. Gracchus says he is a soldier—but writes so aptly about intrigue, we suspect he has been engaged in more wars than one.—However, having almost an inherent respect for those who have fought the battles of their country, Brutus will, at a more leisure moment, hold communion with his brother soldier.

CONGRESSIONAL CAUCUS

AND

THE NEXT PRESIDENT.

These are subjects which should now claim the serious consideration of every friend to Republican Government.

Some opinions relative to this caucus procedure, by the members of Congress, have been disseminated which require to be met in time, or difficulties may result dangerous to the liberties of the people.

In the great struggles between the Federal and Republican parties of the union, it was discovered by both, that union of action was necessary to the success of either. To obtain and preserve this union of action, in the election of the President, it was certainly advisable that measures should be adopted best calculated to effect the end, and least dangerous and difficult in the means. The opinions and wishes of the people upon this subject was the great desideratum. How to obtain these opinions as to the individual preferred by the people for the Presidential chair, was a subject worthy consideration by those who were the immediate representatives of the people in the national assembly. That the members of the Republican or Federal party should have met together—mingled opinions—yielded local feelings and individual attachments, for the good of the whole—resolved, to act in concert, and recommend their course of action to the members of their party, was not only justifiable, but it was their duty. It is a prerogative, which, as individuals, cannot be wrested from them; and properly appreciated, is harmless in its exercise, and beneficial in its consequences. The purity of the motives of those of the Republican party, who have hitherto sanctioned this procedure, cannot be questioned.

The individual who caused the most prominent caucus of the party; the caucus which nominated and recommended the virtuous and able Madison, was no other than the present chief magistrate of Virginia. No state can boast a purer Republican. The nomination of Madison, met the approbation, and was supported by the will of the nation—and so long as these congressional conventions meet purely with the view to ascertain the will of their constituents, as to the individual preferred for the Presidency, and act in conformity to this will, so long the nation will approve and sanction their conventions.

The Representatives in Congress, coming direct from the bosom of the people, are necessarily presumed to know their sentiments upon a subject so momentous, and the true object of their caucus should be a pure representation of the opinions and wishes of the people. In making the selection, a magnanimity is expected worthy the high trusts reposed in the guardians of our rights and interests:—Individual attachments and partialities, local prejudices and feelings, should be sacrificed upon the altar of general good. When, however, our representatives in Congress, shall lose sight of these high considerations—when they begin to assume to themselves the daring prerogative of dictating to the people, who shall be President or what is, (if possible) still worse, when our representatives shall hold their caucus of nomination, and act under the influence of individual enmity—local jealousies, and personal hostility—excited and fomented by a system of intrigue wholly unparalleled—when they shall arrogate the power of representing themselves, and not the people, and thus divide, distract, and enervate their own party, (and such we are well assured is likely to be the character and conduct of the caucus about to be held at Washington;) then, indeed, it becomes necessary for the reflecting part of the community, to speak and to act.

Find as the writer of this article is of the tranquility of retirement, and anxious to avoid at all times a conflict with intrigue and corruption; yet when the dearest interests of the people are about thus to be trampled on with impunity, he can remain silent no longer. Gentlemen, representatives of the caucus, (if caucus you should hold,) bear in mind the ties that bind you to the people—the obligations springing from your high and delegated trusts. Bear in mind that upon this important occasion, although acting unofficially, you should represent the people and not yourselves. It is for their good, and the honor and integrity of your own party, you hold this caucus, consult the will of those you represent, (and whose suffrages, not yours, should make the President,) and you will be supported.—Disregard this will, and in the gratification of your individual feelings, abandon our cause to the troubled sea of division and contention, and you will in yourselves turn be disregarded and abandoned by the people. What other fate can you anticipate? If the period has arrived when the Republicans of an American Congress cannot ascertain to whom those they represent, look as their next President—then it is time to have no more caucuses. If you cannot agree amongst yourselves, as to the sentiments and wishes of the people, then leave it to the people themselves—unbiased and uninfluenced by the low intrigues which now infest you—they will act virtuously and wisely. The American people do not require the dictum of a lean majority of a divided, distracted caucus, to enable them to select a President. If the merits of those who shall be before the community for selection, are not sufficiently conspicuous to entitle them to the confidence and affections of the people, the stamp of approbation which such a caucus can give, will be no passport to our suffrages. The friends round whom you shall attempt to rally, thus enfeebled by divisions amongst yourselves, will wish you had been silent.

We can assert, without the fear of contradiction, by any candid, intelligent man, that four-fifths of the people of Kentucky are now decidedly in favor of Col. Monroe as our next President, and could a vote by the freemen of the country be had to-morrow, such would be the result. Do you expect, gentlemen, that a caucus of division and dissension, such as you are about to hold, will strengthen the claims, or give additional lustre to the merits of Col. Monroe? Such a majority as he might receive, and under the circumstances which it will be given, would perhaps do him more harm than good. Can you, gentlemen, on the other hand, expect that your nomination of Mr. Crawford or Mr. Tompkins will carry either of them to the Presidential chair? A nomination, that should be made at all, will have been produced by a systematic course of intrigue! Not that this intrigue is to be attributed to yourselves; but that you will have been led astray, biased and influenced in your determinations by those who are corrupt—by those who, months ago, formed a systematic course of detraction and defamation to defeat the election of Col. Monroe. Should your contemplated caucus nominate either Mr. Tompkins or Mr. Crawford, as President, it will be a nomination for the caucus, not for the people. You will have represented yourselves, not the voice of the nation. Vain will be your struggle to obtain the support of that people whose will you have violated—whose wishes you have disregarded. There is a majority of the Republican party throughout the union, decidedly for Col. Monroe as President, and should any other individual be nominated by your caucus, this majority (in Kentucky at least) are already apprised of the pitiful and low means by which it will have been effected. If you cannot, gentlemen, yield to the voice of the nation and strengthen the power of your own party, by giving your undivided support to the individual whom they have selected for President—then do not act at all. Concert, union, energy of action, and the integrity of your party, were the only inducements to a caucus. If you cannot contribute in the effectuation of these desirable objects, we admonish you not to divide, distract and disgrace us. Upon this subject it is necessary to speak plainly and boldly. I would not wish to be understood as making any reflections upon either Mr. Tompkins or Mr. Crawford. Far be it from me to take one jot or tittle from their claims to public patronage. A moment has, however arrived, when a candid expression of public sentiment is a duty.

Gov. Tompkins certainly stands high in Kentucky, and deservedly so for his services during the late war. Kentucky always will love warriors. And as evidence of their gratitude, the people would cheerfully make him Vice President. But as President we do not believe he would obtain a single vote in Kentucky, in opposition to Mr. Monroe, even were it possible for him to obtain a majority of the contemplated caucus.

All who know Mr. Crawford, speak of him as a man of intelligence, integrity and high sense of honor, and so far as he has acted in the political world, he seems to have progressed in reputation. But, really, so little known is Mr. Crawford in Kentucky, that it is not unusual to hear it asked "from what state does he come?" And when you ask for the distinguished displays of talents, the long-trying integrity and eminent services which entitle him to the Presidency, you are told, he was Senator of the United States, has been once Minister to France, and is now Secretary of War. Mr. Crawford does not himself feel that his merits have been neglected; and he deserves, and has received in Kentucky increase confidence in his political integrity, in not suffering himself to be used as a pander to the ambitious and designing—an instrument by which the Republican party was to be enticed and misled.

I have digressed farther than was intended in the present number. Having, however, touched incidentally the merits of those most likely to become candidates for the Presidency, and the state of public opinion in Kentucky, justice requires some additional matters of fact, calculated to support the positions already advanced.

The Legislature of Kentucky have recently adjourned, after a session of upwards of ten weeks, and the writer of this article is well known to its members, and can assert, that so far as their opinions were ascertained, four-fifths of that body were decidedly in favor of Col. Monroe.

It is also a fact, well ascertained, when Congress convened, a most decided majority of the Republicans were almost in favor of his election.

I have been well assured, the Republicans of from New York, were also unanimous in his favor, yet, strange to tell, we understand New York and Georgia are now trying to compromise.

Give us the President, says New York, and you shall have the Vice-President. Time was taken to consult and advise, as the manner is at Washington; and from our latest information, Georgia was in labor with the answer. It is a fact, susceptible of proof, that during the fall and winter, several presses were established, although avowedly for other objects, yet with the secret and sole view of writing down Col. Monroe.

In the scale with these gentry, will unfortunately be found, some few would-be great men, who wish to patronize and make a President exclusively for their own use. And such are the intrigues carried on at Washington, at this moment, that it is doubtful whether the republicans can be called a party!—None knows to-day what will be the result of to-morrow! What a spectacle gentlemen for the world? what a feast for your Federal friends! Even at this distance they begin to chuckle at your strifes and hope to profit by your imbecile dissensions.

It is to be regretted that there is to be found in Kentucky, some few honest Republicans, who are cherishing these federal hopes by their exertions to divide, if they cannot continue the public sentiment against Col. Monroe. They are indeed, few in number, and confined principally to the town of Lexington. I do not impugn their motives. Indeed their zeal for a fallen friend is perhaps to be admired.—They were devoted to Gen. Armstrong—their talents had been enlisted in his cause—to save him from sinking, they would have drowned Col. Monroe. Having committed themselves against him, like Shakespeare's hero—they had waded so deep in blood, it was deemed cheaper to go through than turn back.

With the exception of the federalists, we know very few in Kentucky, whose hostility to Mr. Monroe, does not grow out of attachment to Genl. Armstrong; and these gentlemen are now labouring to impart their individual feelings to the community at home, and mislead and deceive as to the real sentiments of Kentucky, abroad;—and there is scarcely a republican in the country, who does not sincerely regret to see the columns of the Reporter and Palladium, devoted to a purpose calculated only to produce amongst their friends an unhappy division and contest, fruitless in its efforts and painful in its consequences. The public sentiment is too deeply rooted in favor of Col. Monroe, to be shaken by blasts of this kind. Thrown into the scale with the intrigues at Washington, it may agitate the wave created by themselves, but can do no more. The helmsman who has fought in one war, and stood firm and erect through the convulsive shocks of another—who has proudly waved a flag of state, and ably vindicated our rights in almost every part of the old world—and who has finally steered our vessel into an honourable and safe harbor, will not now be abandoned by Kentucky. Firm in her adherence to those who were firm in their assertion and support of our rights and our honor, she will shew to the world that she will maintain the principles for which they fought and bled.

This is a subject of much interest, and on which much more can be said than the writer of this article has leisure or ability to say.—Rarely has his pen obtruded itself upon the public. The matters of fact here stated, were due to the community and the cause of the party to which he professes to belong. He pledges himself for their truth, and will at all times vindicate his assertions. Our representatives in congress, if they are our representatives, cannot but profit by them.

The crude, desultory observations of the writer, may be set down for just what they are worth. Their value consists in being the sentiments of REPUBLICAN KENTUCKY.

DIED.—On the 19th instant, near this town, Mrs. MARGARET TROTTER, consort of Colonel JAMES TROTTER of this county. In all the relations of life, the conduct of Mrs. Trotter was amiable and exemplary; her social qualities had attached to her a numerous list of acquaintances and friends, by whom she was respected and beloved; whilst her domestic virtues, had endeared her to all her relations, who will ever cherish her memory and feel the loss which they have sustained by her death.

REAL AMERICAN

IMPROVEMENTS.

THE improved Chimney and Fire-place, by Mr. John C. Brush, of Washington City, D. C. is complete to give an agreeable fire side.—Your old fire places and chimneys which afflict the family with smoke, may be effectually corrected; new ones are constructed with superior advantages, the rooms ventilated with pure air, warm or cold, at pleasure, without opening doors or windows; likewise a great saving of fuel. Gentlemen wishing the improvement, may receive the necessary information by applying to the undersigned (at Mr. Weisiger's Inn) who is duly authorized to introduce and convey the right to others to construct them, which will be done on very liberal terms.

The Domestic Roving and Spinning Machine.

This Machine is completely adapted to the use of the farmer and mechanic, to aid the household manufacture; with one of twelve spindles, one woman may perform the labor of six or eight on the common wheel. This country possessing the advantage of the raw materials at hand, the household manufacture may be carried on in peace or war, with as much benefit as any other mechanical, or agricultural business. The undersigned has received an assignment of the full and exclusive right from the patentee, to make use, and vend to others the right of the said machine within the several states and territories of the United States, south and west of the Delaware river; the territorial right of any part which may be unsold, will be conveyed on very liberal terms to any gentleman who may be disposed to benefit themselves and their fellow citizens, by aiding the introduction of so valuable a labor saving machine.—Mr. Thomas V. Looftbourrow, of Frankfort, Kentucky, will furnish machines complete to order, for patterns to make from in other countries, &c. A machine may be seen and the terms learnt, by applying to the undersigned at Mr. Weisiger's Inn, or to Mr. Looftbourrow, at the Steam Mill.

STEPHEN ANDRES, Assignee. Frankfort, Feb. 6, 1816.

Kentucky Legislature,

JANUARY 31, 1814.

The joint committee appointed to examine Mr. Stephen Andres' Spinning Machine, in conformity to his memorial, proceeded to examine the same, and find it constructed for spinning wool and cotton, and more simplified than any machine heretofore offered for public use; possessing the advantage of the Spinning Billy and Jenny now in use—it may be used as a Billy for roving and spinning warp or filling, or as a Jenny for spinning warp from wool or cotton, which change can be made in a few minutes; the machine contains twelve spindles, and may be worked as a Billy by a common spinner with the aid of a boy or girl from eight to ten years old, and as a Jenny without any aid whatever. It possesses superior advantages for saving labor and expediting the manufacture of domestic goods, that your committee recommends the same to the patronage of the good citizens of this commonwealth.

CERTIFICATE.

This may certify, that I have had in operation for two seasons past, at my place in Bourbon county, Kentucky, one of the domestic Roving and Spinning Machines, introduced into Kentucky by Stephen Andres. On a machine of 12 spindles, well made and attended, one woman with the aid of a small person may perform the labor of five or six on the common wheel. I am fully satisfied of its utility, and that it possesses superior advantages for aiding the household manufacture to any machine now in use, that I have no hesitation in recommending the same to my fellow citizens. FOR SALE,

THE PLANTATION
Whereon the subscriber now resides, CONTAINING

Two hundred & twenty Acres,

SITUATE on the Henry's Mill road, six miles and a half from Lexington, a part of Maj. Meredith's military survey. The land is not to be equalled in Fayette in point of soil, situation, water and timber. There is a superb young orchard of 300 bearing apple trees, of various kind of fruit, calculated for keeping and making Cider. About eighty acres of land for cultivation, ten acres of meadow, and fifty acres of soil for pastures, with the prime timber standing. The water is conveniently situated in the lots, and is equal in quantity to any in Kentucky—the fencing is a great part set on locust logs and well laid off. The Henry's Mill road runs nearly through the centre of the tract, which divides timber, water, &c. There is also a well planned Distillery on the tract, with sufficient water to work until July; also a Blacksmith's shop on the road. The buildings are only tolerable, though a handsome situation is prepared for building. For terms apply to Daniel Bradford, Lexington, or to the subscriber.

Patent Elastic Saddles.

A word to those who are fond of easy riding. The complaint against hard and uneasy saddles, which is for the most part a just and general one, and is really a great grievance to those who have much riding to do, has caused me to turn my mind particularly to that subject, with a view if possible to remedy the evil.—I can, with confidence assure the public that I have accomplished it.—I have projected a plan which is by means of strong and well tempered steel springs, so constructed as to support the saddle seat & give much greater ease to both rider & horse, than saddles made in the common way or any other that I have ever seen, can possibly do. The plan is entirely different from the English elastic saddles with spring bars of steel, whalebone, &c. and also from those with wire springs, and I conceive much superior to either, as the elasticity is greater, and the tree not being put out of its original form, will not be subject to hurting horses on journeys, which is complained of in the saddles with spring bars. A number of gentlemen in this town and its vicinity, have those saddles now in use, and but one sentiment I believe exists among them in favour of their superiority.—The invention is equally as applicable to ladies saddles as to gentlemen's. Any person desirous of purchasing those easy saddles, is at liberty first to make trial of one and judge of their ease for themselves. In point of durability I will warrant them equal to any other saddles, and superior to most.

I have obtained a Patent from the United States for this invention, and am ready to dispose of patent rights to Saddlers, for other counties or states.—If required, I will furnish a tree & with springs ready fixed and strained, which may serve as a model to work by, and will give the necessary instructions.
